

Greg Hobbs

Greg Hobbs is a Consultant in Pain Medicine in Nottingham. He initially trained in general practice and subsequently in anaesthesia and pain medicine in Australia and the UK. He has worked full-time in pain medicine for 15 years and been Clinical Lead for Pain Services at Queen's Medical Centre in Nottingham and Regional Advisor for the Faculty of Pain Medicine, Royal College of Anaesthetists.

Dr Hobbs has a special interest in developing innovative service delivery models and care pathways for patients with spinal and persistent pain. He has developed multidisciplinary services for both NHS and private organisations. One of these services was the winner of a national award (NHS Alliance Award) in 2009. He currently works with a GP healthcare provider as clinical lead for a new community pain service delivering population and better value spinal and chronic pain care in South Nottinghamshire.
